The Feeding Bag Boy

A true story of the Africa

Algeria, 27.03.2017, 00:14 Time

USPA NEWS - In that hopeless world lying calmly in my eyes, There was no morning, there was no sun rise Nothing but a sorrowful lost stare and the little hands, Holding a feeding bag and that tube stuck into her hands Another story was there in those poor African parts

Where a medical tube separated two combined hearts, Where millions of organizations could never organize, A single "normal' life to those innocent little butterflies Oh, what a pity ..

One Day, on my way to the blue world embodying the real one for me And allowing me to talk freely with my friends and my family That Facebook that used to make me both happy and unhappy That Facebook that used to gather the parts of the galaxy I saw a little African child in what seemed to be a white shirt.

Standing like a junior doctor working the night shift,
A question mark on his face told lots of stories
And a pathetic eye accumulating dozens of worries
An African poor child raising the feeding bag of his mother
Maybe checking her pulse too, or thinking to call his father
But there was no stethoscope and there was no father
Because there were no human voices around

Only bodies lying lonely on the ground
Lonely he was, the African child with no ability
Standing disappointed ,unlike the statue of liberty,
That "s enlightening only Manhattan and some imaginary worlds
As the real world is wasting time and words
Alas..That statue could never see the sad faces overseas,
That statue could never feel their empty poor bellies
