The biggest of its kind "RAF-IHH City for Human Welfare" that will accommodate 990 Syrian children who lost their parents during the war opened its doors in Reyhanli town of Antioch.

The Syrian war which entered its sixth year left over one million orphans behind. The orphan children while vulnerable against human traffickers and organ mafia and other life threatening situations do not receive the love and compassion that they so much need.

IHH, which is aware of the dangers awaiting orphans, realized this giant project with the goal to alleviate the suffering and pain of orphan children a bit. To this end in Antioch's Reyhanli town IHH and its sponsor RAF organization established "RAF-IHH City for Human Welfare" [2] that will meet all needs of orphan children primarily housing and education and including healthcare, psychological support, food, clothes and other miscellaneous things in a cosy home environment.

"Today I would like to thank all my lucky brothers who are with us today. Because having the opportunity to do something to care for orphans is a matter of luck. Because caring for orphans make our sins forgiven. I would like to thank Qatar organizations and especially Emir of Qatar for putting their best efforts to help the poor and helpless people since the first day of this war.

Today I am also to witness that when it is about orphans everyone comes together regardless of their differences. Look here today we have people from AK Party, from President's office, and dear brother Temel from Saadet Party. Our president sends his regards to everyone. He asked to have the opening ceremony to be scheduled on 15th of Ramadan for Organization of Islamic Conference celebrates it as World Orphan Day. But on that day Emir of Qatar is not available. God willing we will hold our event when they can both attend. Last but not least I would like to give the good news that we established Orphan Foundation, which is going to carry out education and administration related work of this centre. So it is going to be a joint project of two foundations."
