THE STORY :

In 2012, Tony Stark (Robert Downey Jr.) and the federal government create the U.S. Department of Damage Control (D.O.D.C.), driving Salvage Company owner Adrian Toomes (Michael Keaton) out of Business. Toomes convinces his Colleagues to not surrender the Chitauri Technology already scavenged from the Battle of New York and use it to further a criminal agenda.

Several years after the Avengers' Internal Dispute and Eventual Civil War, Peter Parker (Tom Holland) resumes his studies after being told by Tony Stark himself that he is not yet ready to join the Avengers. Over the objections of his Aunt May (Marisa Tomei), Peter quits his school's decathlon team in order to spend more time focusing on his 'internship', which is a cover for his crimefighting activities as Spider-Man....

OUR REVIEW :

It helps that one of the few things that stood out from this Reboot was the decision to cast the 21-year-old British Actor Tom Holland, previously best known for his roles in 'The Impossible' and the Stage Version of 'Billy Elliot', as Peter Parker. In a few Short Scenes, he made a more Powerful Impression. As well as his ease with Physical Comedy, he seemed like an actual high-schooler, which immediately marked him out from his two Predecessors, both in their late 20s when they played the Character. At a baby-faced 21, the Actor is the youngest of the three recent live-action Spider-Men by some distance.... The refreshing joy of Spider-Man : Homecoming is that it's a relatively self-contained Piece of Entertainment. As such, Peter Parker keeps bailing out of House parties, Inter-school Competitions, and even a Late-night Swim with his Classroom Crush Liz Toomes (Laura Harrier), in order thwart whichever part of the Vulture's villainous scheme is currently in train.
