Alexandre Benalla, the former "chargé de mission" of the Élysée indicted for "violence in meetings", appeared before the senators of the commission of the Laws to answer their questions. During his hearing in front of the Senate, the so famous Alexandre Benalla, Emmanuel Macron's former collaborator assured that he had applied for a "personal" firearm to ensure his own "security " and not he was not the bodyguard of the President of the French Republic.-----

This Friday, Mediapart unveils a photo compromising this version. The photograph is dated April 28, 2017, between the two rounds of the presidential election. During a dinner on the sidelines of a meeting in Poitiers, a waitress makes a selfie with members of Emmanuel Macron's security, including ... Alexandre Benalla. The latter releases a weapon at the time of the photo .. Did Alexandre Benalla circulate with a weapon without authorization? The nagging question posed in particular within the framework of the parliamentary commissions of inquiry is raised again, this time by means of a photo published Monday by Mediapart. According to the investigation of the site of investigation, this selfie where we see the former security officer of the candidate Emmanuel Macron brandishing a pistol while posing with other members of the police service was taken during the night of April 28, 2017, in Poitiers, after a meeting between the two-towers in Châteaulleraut. That is six months before he gets from the Prefecture of Police the famous firearms license which was the subject of many questions during the hearing of Benalla in the Senate. The Senate published upon the extent of the Mission « Mission of information on the conditions under which persons not belonging to the internal security forces could or could be associated with the exercise of their missions of policing and protection of high personalities and the sanctions regime applicable in case of breaches ». Senators, on the other hand, came away from this hearing where Benalla spoke a lot and only delivered "inconsistencies" and contradictions ", compared to what was said before his passage to the commission and just after, with his colleague Vincent Crase, the same day.. Further to the Audition of Alexandre Benalla, at the Senate, last week, during more than 1 hour and a half, the former security guard of the French President Macron, denies his function of « Bodyguard » and adds "precisely", "being in charge of the organisation fo events, at the Elysee Palace " rather than being in charge of the security of the President. The Senators, said they were not convinced by Benalla's audition, and felt, they were disappointed.

they felt that Benalla had bailed them, and the resting ones ready for him to fub with a lot of confidence, of "precision" (The precise word which was pronounced by Alexandre benalla). According to a poll of ELABE, 74% of the French have not been convinced by the prestaion of Alexander Benalla before the commission of the Senate, after refusing to surrender, then decided and forced to go at the last minute. Web users circulated videos and tweets very ironic about the attitude of Benalla and its elements of language, so well prepared and become redundant and anti-productive. On Twitter, with the hashtag #Benalla, users criticize the blurry, evasive responses of the auditioned, as he repeated "I'm gonna answer very precisely" more than 30 times during the audience ..-----

The very accurate and notorious, site of investigation MEDIAPART published yesterday a photo going back to April 28, 2017, where Alexandre Benalla, then in charge of the security of the candidate Emmanuel Macron (ring the French Presidential Campaign), manipulates a weapon at the end of a meeting. At the time, however, he was not allowed to be armed outside the campaign headquarters....To be continued,,,
