Skyline Basketball on the rise

2020 inaugural season is nearing

Dallas TX, 18.01.2020, 17:52 Time

USPA NEWS - Dallas Skyline is part of The Basketball League. The league has 19 teams and is on the playing level of the NBA's G-League. An important part of the basketball world, The Basketball League gives players who do not make an NBA roster an opportunity to play in the U.S. instead of going overseas.

"Dear Basketball, I want to start off saying thank you for not only changing, but also saving my life more times than you realize. You have helped me through many milestones in my life and let me live through you so graciously. Now that we are here, on this journey with the Dallas Skyline, let's change the lives of more young people. Inspire a community. Be a resource for love, compassion, and service. Help me make the Dallas Skyline Basketball Club a pillar of this community and an experience we can be proud of," [?] says Team owner and general manager Prescott Mack.

The buzz has already started around the city that this Dallas Skyline team could be a very special group. On Sunday fans at Loos Fieldhouse got a chance to see some high flying action as the Blue vs White game took place. With 500 fans in attendance the team did not disappoint the crowd as people left the game eager to see more from the team once the regular season starts. The team will be in action tomorrow night in an exhibition matchup against Identity Hoops. Coach Chris Terrell believes in his group of guys and will soon have to make some very difficult decisions as it's almost time to narrow down the roster as the season opener is right around the corner. Prescott Mack (Skyline Owner) makes sure to always give God the praise as he realizes that it is him that has been opening door after door for him on this long journey. The team will have a lot of things that will be going on in the community as this program is built on more than just basketball but making a difference on and off the court. At the end of the day the goal is always win a championship, but this team has already won before the regular season even starts.

Go Skyline!!!!!!
